

TANCHE

The project "Tanche" was founded 2017 during a residence of drummer Jonas Albrecht at "Südpol", a theater and concert house in Lucerne. The quartet with Christian Zemp on guitar, Chadi Messmer on bass and Elischa Heller on laptop and electronics sees itself as a sound lab. The band doesn't categorize itself into certain styles, instead researching the possibilities of their individual instruments, ideas and genres. Little by little, a unique sound was shaped by electronics and rhythm that draws the familiar into unexpected contexts. Both during rehearsals and performances, composition is as important as improvisation. The musicians experiment with extreme contrasts and dynamics, drones and patterns as well as extended techniques and electronic effects.

TANCHE ABOUT THEMSELVES

More important than the what and why of Tanche is the question "where". Where is Tanche? Usually roughly at the bottom and to the right. Sometimes behind you, beating softly, or right in front of your nose. A Tanche is for the most part distinctly damp, quite quick, but perfectly palatable. Tanche is recursive, Tanche kneads me, contradicts itself. Blending wild and tamed electronic and acoustic sounds, Tanche narrates your surreal dreams with distant menacing undertones. Tanche invokes, provokes and corrupts the emotions of failed procrastinations, uninvited erections and the future Soviet Union. And more. Or less. Alors on Tanche.

GAMUT COLLECTIVE ABOUT TANCHE

This mystic group is truly exciting. A concentrated load of sounds; dense, wide, loud, adhesive. Somehow noise, but also rock, somehow soundart, but electronic as well. Something new is sounding; a new energy, a new quest full of tonal experiments.
